

Christina Eisenberg
Director of Employment Equity

Christina Eisenberg currently serves as the Director of Employment Equity at Starbridge. In her current role, Christina oversees Starbridge's partnership with the Employment Equity Coalition to bring about change in Monroe County regarding disability inclusion. Christina's responsibilities include working with the coalition to develop strategic plans educating employers and service provider agencies on the importance of incorporating disability inclusion within all diversity initiatives. Christina works with employers in Monroe County and the City of Rochester to support their disability inclusion needs throughout the employment lifecycle, beginning with recruitment.

Christina previously served as the Manager of the National Business & Disability Council (NBDC) at The Viscardi Center from September 2019 until September 2021. She was overseeing all aspects of the national organization, including membership, marketing, initiatives and services, and revenue generation. Christina oversaw initiatives that supported companies of all sizes across the U.S. in strategic planning of disability inclusion efforts. She previously served as the Employer Service Specialist for the Employer Assistance and Resource Network on Disability Inclusion (EARN). Christina worked with employers nationally on expanding their Diversity and Inclusion efforts to include disability, focusing on recruitment, retention, and advancement of individuals with disabilities. She provided resources and guidance on a wide range of disability employment-related topics, including Disability Awareness, Reasonable Accommodations, Encouraging Self-Identification, and many other issues pertaining to individuals with disabilities in the workplace. Through her role with EARN, Christina provided employers with guidance and connections to qualified candidates with disabilities to fill employment opportunities within their companies/organizations.

Christina has 18+ years of experience serving individuals with varying disabilities and working with employers and agencies. Her career began at the NYC Mayor's Office for People with Disabilities, working directly for Commissioner Matt Sapolin. While working under Commissioner Sapolin, her duties included the development and dissemination of a NYC resource guide on accessibility that has been used both by individuals with disabilities and also by Employee Resource Groups at major companies in the NYC area. After working for the Commissioner, she transitioned into working at an Independent Living Center where her role included not only direct services to individuals with disabilities but also working with local employers on recruitment, retention, and advancement of individuals with disabilities. Much of her career has been spent educating employers of varying sizes on all aspects of disability inclusion in the workplace.

Christina received a B. A in Sociology, a Minor in Education, with a Concentration in Social Work from Manhattan College. She continued on to receive an M.A. in Early Childhood Education from New York University.
